Nokia decides not to continue investment in the joint MoCA-based offering

Nokia has today informed InCoax of its decision not to continue investing in the joint MoCA-based offering and that InCoax products will consequently be removed from Nokia's customer offering. Nokia cites insufficient customer interest in the joint solution as the reason for the decision.

InCoax is now evaluating the implications of Nokia's decision, including its significance in relation to the existing agreements between the parties, and has initiated a dialogue with Nokia regarding the way forward.
