

Advenica begins cooperation with Synkzone for more secure cloud services

Synkzone helps companies, authorities and organisations protect data. The technology is proven and contributes daily to protecting data against both internal and external threats and ensuring compliance with regulations and industry standards.

Advenica and Synkzone have now started a collaboration to enable the use of Advenica's data diodes integrated with Synkzone's cloud service for high security. The collaboration means that information can either be retrieved from a Synkzone domain to a high-security network protected by Advenica's data diode, or from a protected network via Advenica's data diodes to Synkzone. With the help of Advenica's data diodes and the "Advenica Data Diode Engine" software, unidirectional communication to or from Synkzone's secure storage and distribution service is ensured.

— We are very pleased to partner with Advenica, a company that shares our vision of making information management safer and more secure. Together, we will be able to offer our customers even more powerful solutions to protect their valuable data, says Jaime Rico, Sales Manager for Synkzone.

— The collaboration with Synkzone is a collaboration between two Swedish companies that build high assurance solutions for Swedish digital sovereignty. Together we make Sweden more secure, says Marie Bengtsson, CEO at Advenica.
